Sen. John M. Quinlan

CON CON SIGS EXCEED NEED

Senator John M. Quinlan, Chairman of the Committee for a Constitutional Convention filed 17,360 certified signatures, far in excess of the 10,206 required to place the question of calling Massachusetts' first Constitutional Convention in 50 years on the ballot this fall.

The question, No. 4 on this November's ballot, is preliminary and not binding. The people would again have to vote affirmatively in 1970 before the Convention would be called in 1971.

If called, the 150 delegates, chosen on a non-partisan basis, could consider reform in such areas as: the size of the House of Representatives; limitation on the length of legislative sessions; change in the structure and operation of county government; possible institution of regional organizations to deal with the problems of urban transportation, water supply, environmental health, and waste disposal; restructuring of the Executive Branch to complete the process of making administrative officials more responsible to the voters by making them more responsive to the Governor; extension of the franchise by lowering the voting age and reducing residency requirements; and consideration of future methods of Constitutional reform. All recommendation of the Convention would be ratified or rejected by the voters in 1972.

PROGRAMMING TREATMENT OF THE BRAIN DAMAGED CHILD

On Tuesday evening, July 30th at 8:00, in St. Anthony's Hall Feeding Hills, the Agawam Jaycee-ettes will present a program concerning the patterning and rehabilitation of a brain damaged child.

In recent years much attention has been focused on the plight of the brain damaged child, and funds have been expended for research in this field. This program will afford an opportunity for anyone interested to receive an in depth explanation of the problem. How the damage affects the individual child, what alternatives are available to the parents, and the actual techniques used to train other portions of the brain to take over the duties of the damaged portion will be explained.

A short film entitled "What Ever Happened to Eight" will be shown. This film deals with a young boy that receives accidental brain damage at age 7 and the problems that follow this accident.

Questions will be welcome at the conclusion of the program, and light refreshments will be served. There will be no charge for this informative evening and everyone interested is invited.

If you have questions concerning this event you may call Mrs. Frank Rescigno, Chairman, at 739-4956. Those assisting Mrs. Rescigno are, Mrs. Richard Handy, Mrs. John Lawrie, Mrs. James Babcock and Mrs. Paul Pannas.

RODEO RETURNS TO EXPO FOR 68

WEST SPRINGFIELD, Mass.

- Rodeo is cowboys and cowgirls, wild horses and fighting brahma bulls, trick riders and fancy rope spinners. And it all returns to the Eastern States Exposition after its successful appearance here last year.

Robert B. Atkinson, chairman of the executive committee, announced that Howard Harris III will bring his Cowtown Championship Rodeo to the fair from Woodstown, New Jersey, known to most rodeo fans as Cowtown, N.J. Performances are scheduled to open on Wednesday, Sept. 18, and run through Saturday, Sept. 21.

The saga of rodeo is a throwback to the early days of the West. Nineteenth century cowboys originated the sport informally with competition on the open range and ever since rodeo has been a part of Americana, so much so that nine million spectators in more than 500 communities all over the United States last year paid admission to see their childhood idol, the cowboy.

Today, cowboys compete throughout the nation and are governed rigidly by the Rodeo Cowboy's Association of Denver, Colorado.

The Cowtown Championship Rodeo at the Exposition, one of 500 sanctioned by the R.C.A. this year, is typical of all rodeos. It will pit the cowboy against the horse or bull. The cowboy has a deep respect for his wild animal foe.

During its Coliseum run on the fairgrounds, cowboys will compete in the five classic events of rodeo - bareback, bronc riding, saddle bronc riding, steer wrestling, calf roping and brahma bull riding.

The bareback, saddle-bronc and bull riding events are scored on points - if the rider stays up and on long enough to qualify. Steer-wrestling and calf-roping are timed events, with cowboys battling both the beast and the clock to win.

Over 100 contestants from 29 states will be vying for prize money and because it is a sanctioned event, individual scores will count toward national titles.

FOCUS: OUTDOORS AT U OF M

Amateur and professional scientists from all over the Northeast will converge on the University of Massachusetts campus in Amherst on August 2-4 to participate in FOCUS: OUTDOORS, a natural history conference. This second annual workshop is sponsored by the Massachusetts Audubon Society and is open to the public.

Many of the naturalists who will be traveling to the conference will serve as instructors and entertainers, but most of the 1000 participants will enjoy an informal vacation weekend of natural history education with the experts. Two celebrated naturalist photographers, Dr. Olin Sewall Pettingill, Jr., Director of the Laboratory of Ornithology at Cornell University in New York, and Robert Hermes, a National Audubon Screen Tour lecturer from Florida, will narrate their color nature movies. Harvard University will send two renowned scientists, Dr. Alfred Sherwood Romer and Dr. Carroll Williams. Nature photographers Jack Englert, FSPA, of Eastman Kodak, and Leslie Campbell, FPSA, a widely praised amateur will present color slide programs.

More than thirty informal lecture-demonstrations will be conducted by scientists, amateur naturalists, conservationists and students on subjects ranging from seashore life to backpacking, from ferns and trees to rocks and stars. This Nature College will find professors from Amherst, Westfield, Springfield and Smith Colleges, and the University of Massachusetts teaching alongside several graduate students, a physicist talking about hiking, a florist displaying spiders, a high school teacher demonstrating his hand-made telescopes, and a Maine guide showing his woodcraft skills. Field trips on ecology, ferns, trees, birds and geology will tour the Connecticut Valley.

Teachers will find a number of classes that will aid them professionally, including "Careers In Natural History", "Schoolgrounds: Focus For Teaching", "Selections for a Nature Library" and "The Bird In Art".

A special feature of this year's conference will be the "Hall of Conservation Action", an invitational exhibit by

Report from THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson's Citizen's Aid Bureau is about to celebrate its first birthday as the state's unofficial complaint bureau for citizens seeking solutions to the problems arisin from their dealings with other state agencies.

Upon its establishment last year, Richardson said of the bureau, "Whenever possible it will respond directly to the citizen's inquiry or complaint. Whenever necessary it will refer the matter to the appropriate division of the Attorney General's department or to any other agency best equipped to deal with it."

Both Richardson and the head of the bureau, Leon L. Dary, Jr., of Barnstable, emphasized that the bureau does not "pass the buck" to other agencies.

In most cases, Dary emphasized, a call or letter is handled quickly and the citizen can usually expect a personal reply to his question. In some cases hours of research and several calls to state agencies are necessary before the answer can be found. The bureau regularly processes about fifty calls and letters a day, Dary noted.

Other members of Dary's staff include Miss Edna J. Gustafson of Worcester, Dary's administrative assistant, Assistant Attorney General Charles F. Peoples of Stoneham, Deputy Assistant Attorney General Ruy Villela of New Bedford, and Miss Anne Curran of Boston, the bureau's secretary.

The bureau handles a wide range of problems, many simple, others involving matters of life and death. For example, Dary and his staff have advised an elderly welfare recipient that under the law he is entitled to a free hunting license. They have informed store owners how the so-called blue-laws affect them, as well as advising town government officials on questions like "Can we repeal a certain article?"

To aid citizens with critical problems, the bureau keeps an accurate list of emergency medical equipment in private hospitals and clinics in the state. Said Dary about this information, "Private hospitals are not required to report such equipment, so it was well worth our efforts to acquire the listings. They have come in handy in a number of emergency cases."

Dary described a case which occurred on a quiet Saturday afternoon when nobody else could be reached. A Milton family whose home had been destroyed by fire several hours before was in dire need of help. By suppertime the bureau had found clothes from churches and other charitable organizations for the entire family.

Making a general statement about what seems to bother Massachusetts residents most, as indicated by nearly a year of mail and calls, Dary said it is the feeling that government is "too big" to be interested in their particular problems.

"We're trying to prove it isn't so, by giving each person who writes or calls a personal reply," Dary said.

"We're not looking for extra work, necessarily, but we want people who need help to know we are here, at least," Dary concluded.

"The first six months of this year has been one of the very best first halves in the history of Western Bank & Trust," Mr. Franks said. "We have exceeded $8 million in assets in six years, and I am confident that we will maintain a growth rate of better than $1 million each year as we have during these first years of the bank's operation."

The increase in loan volume was just short of $1 million, totaling $4,578,582 on June 30 of this year, compared with $3,592,237 on the same date last year.

Deposits were up by $1,978,116, totaling $7,294,795 on June 30 of this year against the figure of $5,316,679 on June 30 last year.

Mr. Franks said Western Bank & Trust's second branch office, in Feeding Hills, is now under construction, and a November opening is anticipated. The bank has a branch at 1000 Riverdale in West Springfield.

"BANEFUL INFLUENCE"

"Its baneful influence is found not only in its direct impact — the tragic displacement of the Negro poor whose difficulties are made intolerable by mass evictions to make way for the highways that will benefit them not at all. Its indirect effects are certainly as bad. An overcommitment to highways has eroded the base of the other transportation modes on which the poor depend. As currently planned and administered, the federal program has contributed to the economic degeneration of the older core cities and has damaged or destroyed many of their cultural values — historic features, parks, and established neighborhoods. In rural and suburban areas, irreplaceable open space has been taken, speculative development encouraged and land use plans overturned by the impact of interstate highways."

— Archibald Robers, Baltimore architect, testifying before the Senate Public Works Subcommittee on Roads, May 8, 1968.

NEEDED: MOBILITY AND QUALITY

"On the one hand, personal mobility remains a cherished right in a free society, and essential to the pursuit of each individual's goals. Highway transportation is the basis for the unprecedented degree of personal mobility we enjoy today, as well as for the scope and dependability of freight movement. Maintaining mobility in a growing economy clearly requires the continued growth of highway transportation."

"On the other hand, highway transportation cannot be allowed to function apart from or in conflict with its environment. Inevitably, it directly affects the quality of the environment, for better or for worse. Inevitably, it interacts with other personal and community aspirations in such areas as conservation of natural beauty, provision of parks and playgrounds, preservation of historic sites, improved housing and schools and neighborhoods, cleaner air, and general community well-being."

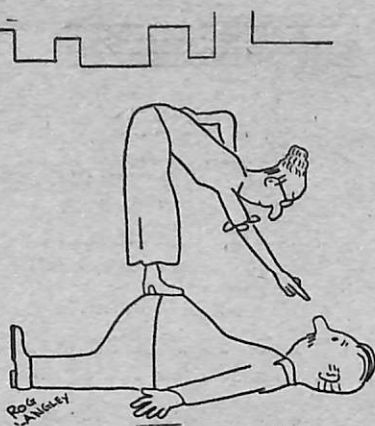

— Lowell K. Bridwell, Federal Highway Administrator, in "The Freeway in the City," 1968, Government Printing Office.

"I've written an ancient Roman play, and it's a good play, except that the title is too long."

"What's the title?"

"Julius. Grab Her Quick Before She Gets Away and Runs!"

"Why not just call it 'Julius, Caesar'?"

Cook: Where have you been all morning?

Messcook: Filling salt shakers, like you told me.

Cook: All that time?

Messcook: Well, it ain't easy pouring salt through them little holes!

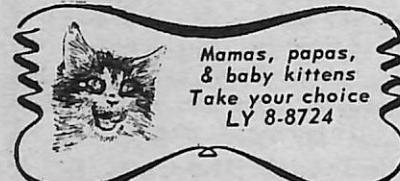

LARRY GARRON

Larry Garron, Boston Patriots' star, has joined the dairy and food firm, H. P. Hood and Sons. Garron will represent the company at community meetings and seminars that relate to programs involving recruitment, employment and training of minority group members. His schedule will be arranged so that he will continue to play for the Boston Patriots during the football season. In his new position, he also will be a member of the Hood Civil Rights Coordinating Committee which was formed recently to provide overall guidance and direction for the company's activities in the civil rights area.

Garron completed his studies at Western Illinois University. He has been athletic director and guidance counselor for the South End Boys Club of Boston for the past five years, working on community problems and with youth groups and businessmen's organizations to promote better employment opportunities for minority groups. He was an assistant to Ralph (Study) Ward on the Youth Service Board of Cambridge and is presently serving as an advisor on this board.

The 31-year-old Garron is an original Patriot, having joined the club in its initial 1960 season. He has been selected to the American Football League All-Star team four times and was voted his team's Most Valuable Player in 1963.

ROAST CORN ON THE COB

First you pull the husks back and remove the silk, then you put the husks back on and tie in place. Soak corn 5 minutes in salted water and drain. Grill-roast 10-12 minutes, turning often. Remove husks and serve with butter and salt.

Because corn loses flavor rapidly, look for fresh, green husks, and bright, plump, slightly firm kernels to be sure of good eating.
